

EDCP

Summer Institute

EDCP 467D

Special Study: Home Economics

Practical Foods

A concentrated look at food preparation and food science

Course date | July 29 - August 2, 2024

Time | 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. PT

Format | In Person

Location | Scarfe 1214, UBC Vancouver Campus

Register by | May 31, 2024

Instructor | Jennifer Johnson

Academic contact, for all course inquiries:

Dr. Kerry Renwick | kerry.renwick@ubc.ca

This program is offered by the Department of Curriculum & Pedagogy, Faculty of Education.

For more information and to register visit:

▶ edcp.educ.ca

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Faculty of Education

Department of Curriculum & Pedagogy

EDCP 467D | Available for credit

Learning to cook is a great activity for all ages, and it involves more than just breaking the seal on a pre-packaged product. Cooking skills are not only important for healthy living, they are also a great way to be creative and have fun in the kitchen.

In this course you will work hands-on to prepare different dishes and learn about why certain foods behave as they do. For home economics teachers, this course has been designed to provide understanding for both the how and the why behind teaching foods classes.

This course is experiential. It utilises preparation of food to learn about food science and food literacy.